

The Irish Times - Monday, January 23, 2012

How to save public money

Sir, – I am in full agreement with the comment under the Disability heading in your article "Public proposes 1,000 ways to save money" (Home News, January 19th).

Last week I attempted to return the brand new, never-used commode provided to my late mother-in-law towards the end of 2011. This item will be scrapped as it cannot be taken back in and sent to another person requiring one.

I can understand part of the argument, but why not take the equipment back and just put in a new toilet-pan section? What a waste of resources when the State needs to save every euro it can.

PHILIP SUTER,

Princes Risborough,

Buckinghamshire,

England.

In this section »

- ▾ Recession causing mental anguish
- ▾ Charges for fire emergency call-outs
- ▾ If you don't have a TV ...
- ▾ A day for the 'lost generation'
- ▾ Beethoven's shopping note
- ▾ Discrimination against diabetics?

ADVERTISEMENT

Shape your future here
www.surreycc.gov.uk/jobs

Latest

- 11:46 Greek parties to resume talks on €130bn bailout deal
- 11:20 Philippines earthquake kills 7
- 11:16 England's slim hopes fade fast
- 11:16 Capello may have 'breached' contract
- 11:15 50 dead in latest Syria attacks
- 11:10 Romanian PM stands down
- 10:56 DCC completes Swea Energi acquisition
- 10:51 Low-income families 'struggling'

Popular Stories

Most Read | Most Shared

ADVERTISEMENT