SCANDINAVIAN OBERSERVATIONS

Our three weeks "Scandinavian Promotion" are ended and we would like to thank readers of 'Spotlight' (that means all at Suters in Uxbridge) for having made us so welcome, and to tell you how we enjoyed working at your store.

The customers were very interested in us, our countries, our national costumes and the Scandinavian goods on sale.

While we were having our lunches we usually told one another incidents which happened during the morning, and we often had a good laugh. Such as when we were asked whether Denmark was the capital of Norway. Denmark is, in fact, the smallest of the Scandinavian countries and even the Danish language is sometimes confused with Dutch.

Our customer, pulling out a handful of £ notes, asked the floor supervisor if he could buy Miss Sweden, have her gift wrapped and sent on to his home .....
